Names and Surnames in Kosovo

Introduction

For the first time, the Kosovo Agency of Statistics (KAS) has published a report on names and surnames in Kosovo.

One of the things people and places have in common is the NAME. In many cases, people are interested about the origin of their name and whether their name has a meaning. Names are words or set of words by which a person, place or other being is known, addressed or referred to.

While the name is the attribute given to a person for the purpose of identification (after birth), the surname is inherited from the family we share with other family members. In Kosovo the surname usually comes from the father. Surname of the family children taken from the father is also known in most European countries.

Surname, a hereditary name common to all members of a family, a distinct from given name, has come later as a result of the need to distinguish people from each other. Surnames in Albanian population are estimated to have been applied since the late 18th century.

The report will provide data on the most common names and surnames in Kosovo and their extension in municipalities of Kosovo based on resident population from the Census of 2011.

The report provides data to the broader Kosovan society, and further, so that they can study the origin, extension and the meaning of their names and surnames. This report is based on user's request that may be relevant to other research areas, as Genealogy¹, Etymology², or Onomastics³.

1 Characteristics of Name and Surname

The full legal Name of a person usually in the documents contains at most three identifying terms: name, middle name (usually for females after marriage), and at the end the surname or last name or family name.

Depending on the country, the Name and Surname is written in two forms: First the Name is entered or is given and then the Surname, as in: Kosovo, Albania, English speaking countries, most European countries, South America, etc., while in some other countries first the Surname is entered or given and then the Name, as in: Hungary, France, Belgium, Greece, Italy, Romania, Japan, China, etc.

In Kosovo, and many European and English-speaking countries, just one Surname is usually used, in some Portuguese or Spanish speaking countries usually are used two Surnames, while in Arabic countries usually more than two Surnames are used.

In Slavic countries, including Greece and Iceland, there are different forms of family names for male and female family members. Family name issues arise, in particular, in giving the name to a just-born child, where a common family surname is approved even upon marriage, renouncing the family name and replacing a new family name.

Etymologists classify European Surnames into five categories depending on their origin: given surname, professional surname, country surname, nickname and decorative surname.

The Name and Surname in statistics is usually used as an alternative key for identification in cases where other source data are missing.

But in many cases, we have identical Names and Surnames from the same location / residence, which in some cases cause difficulties in identifying the person in question.

2.1 Names and Surnames according to time periods (1940-2011)

As noted above, the Name is the attribute that is mainly attributable or invoked by the parents (or their consent) and that Names change all the time by adapting to general developments, while Surnames usually are inherited from the family (mainly the father) and are subject to few changes in time.

⁴Census of Population, Households and Dwellings in Kosovo, 2011

The following Table shows the transformation of Names over different periods of time, adapting to historical-political, social, religious and national developments. While in the years 1940-1960 dominated names such as Fatime, Emine, Ajshe, Bajram or Ramadan, in the years 1961-1980 dominated names: Agim, Bekim, Fadil, Afëdita or Ganimete. By the end of the 1980s the Names were more related to earlier historical, social, religious, etc. developments, but after the 1990s the Names had mostly Albanian meaning like: Egezon, Liridona, Qendresa, Erëaza, Edona, etc.

Surname Krasniqi was dominant almost in most of the period of time reviewed in this report, apart from the years 1951-1960 and 2001-2011 which showed that the surname Gashi was mostly pronounced compared to Krasniqi. Some of the factors that may have affected this dominant family Surname are: more / fewer natural increase, migration and change of Surname.

The Table below reflects five (5) most pronounced Names and Surnames over time periods as well changes through time.

3 The same Name and Surname

In many cases in Kosovo we encounter persons with the same name and surname which, in some cases in the past, were difficult to identify in time periods (causing delays, suspicions or even wrongdoing), given that we have many cases where persons in Kosovo have in common such as: name, surname, place of residence, municipality, state and year of birth.

Recent technological developments have enabled the advancement of databases and their exchange through time periods based on the personal number, date and month of birth which are used as the key for identification.

In the Table below, are given ten (10) names that have the same surname in order to estimate their frequency.

Table 4. Ten Names combined with Surnames in Kosovo (same Name and Surname)
